The Republican silver legislation was enounced as the culmination of a dis-olical plot to ruin the country, and protection was denounced as robbery and lectared unconstitutional; yet, a Demodeclared unconstitutional; ret, a Detro-cratic home with the largest majority they ever had failed in an attempt to repeal the Sherman silver law, and the other "twin relic of barbarism," was not even challenged in its cateer of robbery and spolintion. Strikes are increasing in number and magnitude; the balance of trade is large ly against us; the business situation generally is getting critical in the ex-treme; all of which, we are told, is due to victous Republican legislation on the two great questions of finance and tariff. Then why delay? Why not let the "smashing proceed at once?

They tell us that it will not do to make sudden changes in our financial and tariff taws, but if the laws complained of by the Democrats in the last campaign are half as pernicious as they represented them to be there can be no such excuse urged with sincerity, for there would be just as much in urging the firemen to go slow in trying to stop a conflagration. There is a suspicion conflagration. There is a suspicior in the minds of a majority of the people that the country was beautifully buncoed in the last campaign, and that the pres-ent unsettled state of affairs is due to the uncertainties of the future.

> INDIA'S INFINITE VARIETY. Her Society and Her Scenery Complex and Varied to a Degree. The grand difficulty of talking to an Englishman about India is that he always forms a picture of the place in his mind. It may be accurate or inac-curate, but it is always a picture. He thinks of it either as a green delta, or a series of sunbaked plains, or a wild region, with jungle and river and farms all intermixed, or a vast park stretched out by nature for sportsmen, and sloping somehow at the edges toward highly cultivated plains, says the London Spectator. It never occurs to him that as regards external aspect there is no India, that the peninsula, so-called, is as large as Europe west of the Vistula, and presents as many variations of scenery. East Anglia is not so different from Italy as the north-Robert Whitehead of Pawhuska shot west provinces from Bengal, nor are Punjab is unlike the hunting districts The editor of the Purcell Register has of Madras.
